

HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS
OF
VIRGINIA;

CONTAINING
A COLLECTION OF THE MOST INTERESTING FACTS, TRADITIONS,
BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES, ANECDOTES, &c.

RELATING TO
ITS HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES,

TOGETHER WITH
GEOGRAPHICAL AND STATISTICAL DESCRIPTIONS.

TO WHICH IS APPENDED,
AN HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE SKETCH
OF THE
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

ILLUSTRATED BY
OVER 100 ENGRAVINGS.

GIVING
VIEWS OF THE PRINCIPAL TOWNS,—SEATS OF EMINENT MEN,—
PUBLIC BUILDINGS,—RELICS OF ANTIQUITY,—HISTORIC LOCALITIES, NATURAL SCENERY, ETC., ETC.

BY HENRY HOWE.

[Arms of Virginia.]

[Thus always with tyrants.]

CHARLESTON, S. C.
PUBLISHED BY W. R. BABCOCK.

1849.

ENTERED,
ACCORDING TO THE ACT OF CONGRESS, IN THE YEAR 1845,
BY BABCOCK & CO.,
IN THE OFFICE OF THE CLERK OF THE DISTRICT COURT OF
SOUTH CAROLINA.

PREFACE.

THE primary object of the following pages is to narrate the most prominent events in the history of Virginia, and to give a geographical and statistical view of her present condition. Similar volumes* have appeared on Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey. The favorable reception of these in their respective states, has led to the opinion that one upon Virginia—the mother of states and statesmen, the “Old Dominion,” so rich in historic lore—would meet not only the approval of Virginians, but be favorably received by others.

Early in the year 1843 we commenced travelling over the state, collecting materials and taking sketches for illustrations. Every section of the commonwealth was visited. The better to effect our purpose, we occasionally journeyed hundreds of miles on foot, often sharing alike the hospitality of the planter and the mountaineer, and cheered onward by pleasant interviews with some of her most intelligent citizens. Much valuable information has been thus obtained, by observation and inquiry, and interesting but scattered details of her history and antiquities collected in a form to ensure their preservation. Written communications, moreover, have been received, embodying facts enhancing the value of this publication, and placing us under lasting obligation to their authors.

This work has three departments. The first—an outline, or general history—comprises an abstract of leading events from the first settlement of Virginia to the present time; the first five chapters of which are from the admirably written historical sketch in Martin's Gazetteer,† and the last by a gentleman personally familiar with most of the events related. The second consists of miscellanies, intended to throw light upon the past and present condition of the commonwealth. The third and principal department, is arranged in counties, in alphabetical order, where each is successively described. In this are the descriptions of towns, literary institutions, historic localities, seats and memoirs of eminent Virginians, antique structures, natural scenery, anecdotes, local history, and events but glanced at in the outline sketch, fully detailed.

* The first—on Connecticut—was published in 1836; the one on Massachusetts, 1838; New York, 1841; Pennsylvania, 1843, and New Jersey, 1844. Connecticut and Massachusetts were prepared by John W. Barber—the pioneer in works on this plan; New York and New Jersey by John W. Barber and Henry Howe; and Pennsylvania by Sherman Day.

† This work, published in 1836, was the first issued descriptive of Virginia, since the celebrated notes of Mr. Jefferson. Our publishers having purchased the copyright, we have availed ourselves of it in preparing this volume.

Thus the volume comprehends a history and a gazetteer. Its advantages over formal histories are, that the events and their localities are given together, serving more strongly to impress the memory; the past and present are in juxtaposition, and many events given which regular history, in her stately march, does not stop aside to notice—events usually considered of minor importance, but forming the undercurrent of history, and useful in illustrating the advancement and condition of society.

Written history forms but a small part of occurrences. The vicissitudes of war have been considered more worthy of narration, than those things promoting the wellbeing of man. Says an eminent essayist: "The perfect historian considers no anecdote, no peculiarity of manner, no familiar saying, as too insignificant for his notice, which is not too insignificant to illustrate the operation of laws, of religion, and of education, and to mark the progress of the human mind."

The great variety of subjects presented, and the almost impossibility of producing such a publication without errors and imperfections, has created a degree of diffidence in submitting it to the public. It will doubtless come before many possessing better means of information, and more knowledge on some subjects introduced, than could reasonably be expected in us.

Besides drawing largely from a great variety of publications, we are enabled to present much not previously published, as well as that inaccessible to the mass of readers. We do not, however, consider ourselves responsible for every sentiment introduced in these pages. In order to form a correct judgment, it is useful to hear the opinions of those who differ from us in their religious or political sentiments.

The drawings for the numerous engravings were, with a few exceptions only, taken by us on the spot. We trust they have an honest look, and faithfully represent their originals. Some biographical sketches are doubtless omitted, not less important than many inserted, while others have not due prominence. In some few cases we have supposed the reader to be familiar with them, while in others it arises from the extreme difficulty of obtaining the desired information.

The history of Virginia is of deep interest; but one imperfectly chronicled. Much is left to the investigation of the antiquarian, and many a thrilling episode is lost in the lapse of generations. Yet enough remains to stimulate the loftiest patriotism; while the memory of her illustrious sons is cherished with just pride by our common country.

Thus the volume comprehends a history and a gazetteer. Its advantages over formal histories are, that the events and their localities are given together, serving more strongly to impress the memory; the past and present are in juxtaposition, and many events given which regular history, in her stately march, does not step aside to notice—events usually considered of minor importance, but forming the undercurrent of history, and useful in illustrating the advancement and condition of society.

Written history forms but a small part of occurrences. The vicissitudes of war have been considered more worthy of narration, than those things promoting the wellbeing of man. Says an eminent essayist: "The perfect historian considers no anecdote, no peculiarity of manner, no familiar saying, as too insignificant for his notice, which is not too insignificant to illustrate the operation of laws, of religion, and of education, and to mark the progress of the human mind."

The great variety of subjects presented, and the almost impossibility of producing such a publication without errors and imperfections, has created a degree of diffidence in submitting it to the public. It will doubtless come before many possessing better means of information, and more knowledge on some subjects introduced, than could reasonably be expected in us.

Besides drawing largely from a great variety of publications, we are enabled to present much not previously published, as well as that inaccessible to the mass of readers. We do not, however, consider ourselves responsible for every sentiment introduced in these pages. In order to form a correct judgment, it is useful to hear the opinions of those who differ from us in their religious or political sentiments.

The drawings for the numerous engravings were, with a few exceptions only, taken by us on the spot. We trust they have an honest look, and faithfully represent their originals. Some biographical sketches are doubtless omitted, not less important than many inserted, while others have not due prominence. In some few cases we have supposed the reader to be familiar with them, while in others it arises from the extreme difficulty of obtaining the desired information.

The history of Virginia is of deep interest; but one imperfectly chronicled. Much is left to the investigation of the antiquarian, and many a thrilling episode is lost in the lapse of generations. Yet enough remains to stimulate to the loftiest patriotism; while the memory of her illustrious sons is cherished with just pride by our common country.

Thus the volume comprehends a history and a gazetteer. Its advantages over formal histories are, that the events and their localities are given together, serving more strongly to impress the memory; the past and present are in juxtaposition and many events given which regular history, in her stately march, does not step aside to notice—events usually considered of minor importance, but forming the undercurrent of history, and useful in illustrating the advancement and condition of society.

Written history forms but a small part of occurrences. The vicissitudes of war have been considered more worthy of narration, than those things promoting the wellbeing of man. Says an eminent essayist: "The perfect historian considers no anecdote, no peculiarity of manner, no familiar saying, as too insignificant for his notice, which is not too insignificant to illustrate the operation of laws, of religion, and of education, and to mark the progress of the human mind."

The great variety of subjects presented, and the almost impossibility of producing such a publication without errors and imperfections, has created a degree of diffidence in submitting it to the public. It will doubtless come before many possessing better means of information, and more knowledge on some subjects introduced, than could reasonably be expected in us.

Besides drawing largely from a great variety of publications, we are enabled to present much not previously published, as well as that inaccessible to the mass of readers. We do not, however, consider ourselves responsible for every sentiment introduced in these pages. In order to form a correct judgment, it is useful to hear the opinions of those who differ from us in their religious or political sentiments.

The drawings for the numerous engravings were, with a few exceptions only, taken by us on the spot. We trust they have an honest look, and faithfully represent their originals. Some biographical sketches are doubtless omitted, not less important than many inserted, while others have not due prominence. In some few cases we have supposed the reader to be familiar with them, while in others it arises from the extreme difficulty of obtaining the desired information.

The history of Virginia is of deep interest; but one imperfectly chronicled. Much is left to the investigation of the antiquarian, and many a thrilling episode is lost in the lapse of generations. Yet enough remains to stimulate to the loftiest patriotism; while the memory of her illustrious sons is cherished with just pride by our common country.

Thus the volume comprehends a history and a gazetteer. Its advantages over formal histories are, that the events and their localities are given together, serving more strongly to impress the memory; the past and present are in juxtaposition, and many events given which regular history, in her stately march, does not step aside to notice—events usually considered of minor importance, but forming the undercurrent of history, and useful in illustrating the advancement and condition of society.

Written history forms but a small part of occurrences. The vicissitudes of war have been considered more worthy of narration, than those things promoting the wellbeing of man. Says an eminent essayist: "The perfect historian considers no anecdote, no peculiarity of manner, no familiar saying, as too insignificant for his notice, which is not too insignificant to illustrate the operation of laws, of religion, and of education, and to mark the progress of the human mind."

The great variety of subjects presented, and the almost impossibility of producing such a publication without errors and imperfections, has created a degree of diffidence in submitting it to the public. It will doubtless come before many possessing better means of information, and more knowledge on some subjects introduced, than could reasonably be expected in us.

Besides drawing largely from a great variety of publications, we are enabled to present much not previously published, as well as that inaccessible to the mass of readers. We do not, however, consider ourselves responsible for every sentiment introduced in these pages. In order to form a correct judgment, it is useful to hear the opinions of those who differ from us in their religious or political sentiments.

The drawings for the numerous engravings were, with a few exceptions only, taken by us on the spot. We trust they have an honest look, and faithfully represent their originals. Some biographical sketches are doubtless omitted, not less important than many inserted, while others have not due prominence. In some few cases we have supposed the reader to be familiar with them, while in others it arises from the extreme difficulty of obtaining the desired information.

The history of Virginia is of deep interest; but one imperfectly chronicled. Much is left to the investigation of the antiquarian, and many a thrilling episode is lost in the lapse of generations. Yet enough remains to stimulate to the loftiest patriotism; while the memory of her illustrious sons is cherished with just pride by our common country.

Thus the volume comprehends a history and a gazetteer. Its advantages over formal histories are, that the events and their localities are given together, serving more strongly to impress the memory; the past and present are in juxtaposition, and many events given which regular history, in her stately march, does not step aside to notice—events usually considered of minor importance, but forming the undercurrent of history, and useful in illustrating the advancement and condition of society.

Written history forms but a small part of occurrences. The vicissitudes of war have been considered more worthy of narration, than those things promoting the wellbeing of man. Says an eminent essayist: "The perfect historian considers no anecdote, no peculiarity of manner, no familiar saying, as too insignificant for his notice, which is not too insignificant to illustrate the operation of laws, of religion, and of education, and to mark the progress of the human mind."

The great variety of subjects presented, and the almost impossibility of producing such a publication without errors and imperfections, has created a degree of diffidence in submitting it to the public. It will doubtless come before many possessing better means of information, and more knowledge on some subjects introduced, than could reasonably be expected in us.

Besides drawing largely from a great variety of publications, we are enabled to present much not previously published, as well as that inaccessible to the mass of readers. We do not, however, consider ourselves responsible for every sentiment introduced in these pages. In order to form a correct judgment, it is useful to hear the opinions of those who differ from us in their religious or political sentiments.

The drawings for the numerous engravings were, with a few exceptions only, taken by us on the spot. We trust they have an honest look, and faithfully represent their originals. Some biographical sketches are doubtless omitted, not less important than many inserted, while others have not due prominence. In some few cases we have supposed the reader to be familiar with them, while in others it arises from the extreme difficulty of obtaining the desired information.

The history of Virginia is of deep interest; but one imperfectly chronicled. Much is left to the investigation of the antiquarian, and many a thrilling episode is lost in the lapse of generations. Yet enough remains to stimulate to the loftiest patriotism; while the memory of her illustrious sons is cherished with just pride by our common country.

serted, returned home. Sir Richard Grenville arrived soon after with three ships, well furnished with stores for the colony; but not finding it, he also returned, leaving fifteen men on Roanoke Island, to keep possession in the name of Great Britain.

The genius of Sir Walter Raleigh was not of a nature to succumb to slight failures, or ordinary difficulties. The succeeding year another colony was dispatched to settle in Virginia; and that they might consider their settlement permanent, and Virginia their home, many persons with wives and families were sent.

Jan. 7. A charter of incorporation was granted for a town, to be called the City of Raleigh, a name revived in after times in the present metropolis of North Carolina. John White was appointed governor, and, with eleven assistants, constituted the administration for the control of the colony. Ample provision was made by the noble and liberal proprietor for the comfort of the colonists, and a plentiful stock of instruments of husbandry provided, to enable them to supply their own future wants, and establish themselves on the only footing which could possibly be expected to be permanent.

April 26. The company embarked in April, and arrived in July at the place where they expected to find the fifteen unfortunate men whom Grenville had left. But their grounds were grown up in weeds, their tenantless dwellings had become the abode of the wild animals of the forest, and their scattered bones, blanching in the sun, were the last sad memorials which told their fate to their anxious countrymen. Whether they fell by civil dissensions among themselves, by famine or disease, or were yet more miserably cut off by the overpowering numbers of a savage host, taking advantage of their desolate situation, (deprived of sympathy, and destitute of the hope of succor,) is one of the mysteries of history which the ken of man may not unravel.

The sagacity of Raleigh had directed the new settlement to be made on the shores of the magnificent Chesapeake, and there was the new city to be built; but the naval officer, preferring trade with the West Indies to exploring the coast, left White on July 23. Roanoke Island, and compelled him to establish himself there.

The colony soon became involved in difficulties with the natives, partly from accident, and partly from the previously engendered hostility of some of the tribes. Indeed, it would seem impossible a priori, (even if we had not, unfortunately, too much experience of the fact,) that two nations of such different degrees of civilization, manners, and habits, with such different designs, could long remain together in peace, harmony, and on the footing of equals. It would seem to be the nature of man that the ignorant tribe should be jealous, treacherous, and vindictive,—that the more civilized should be greedy, rapacious, and overbearing. And when a spirit of suspicion is once excited, the imprudence of

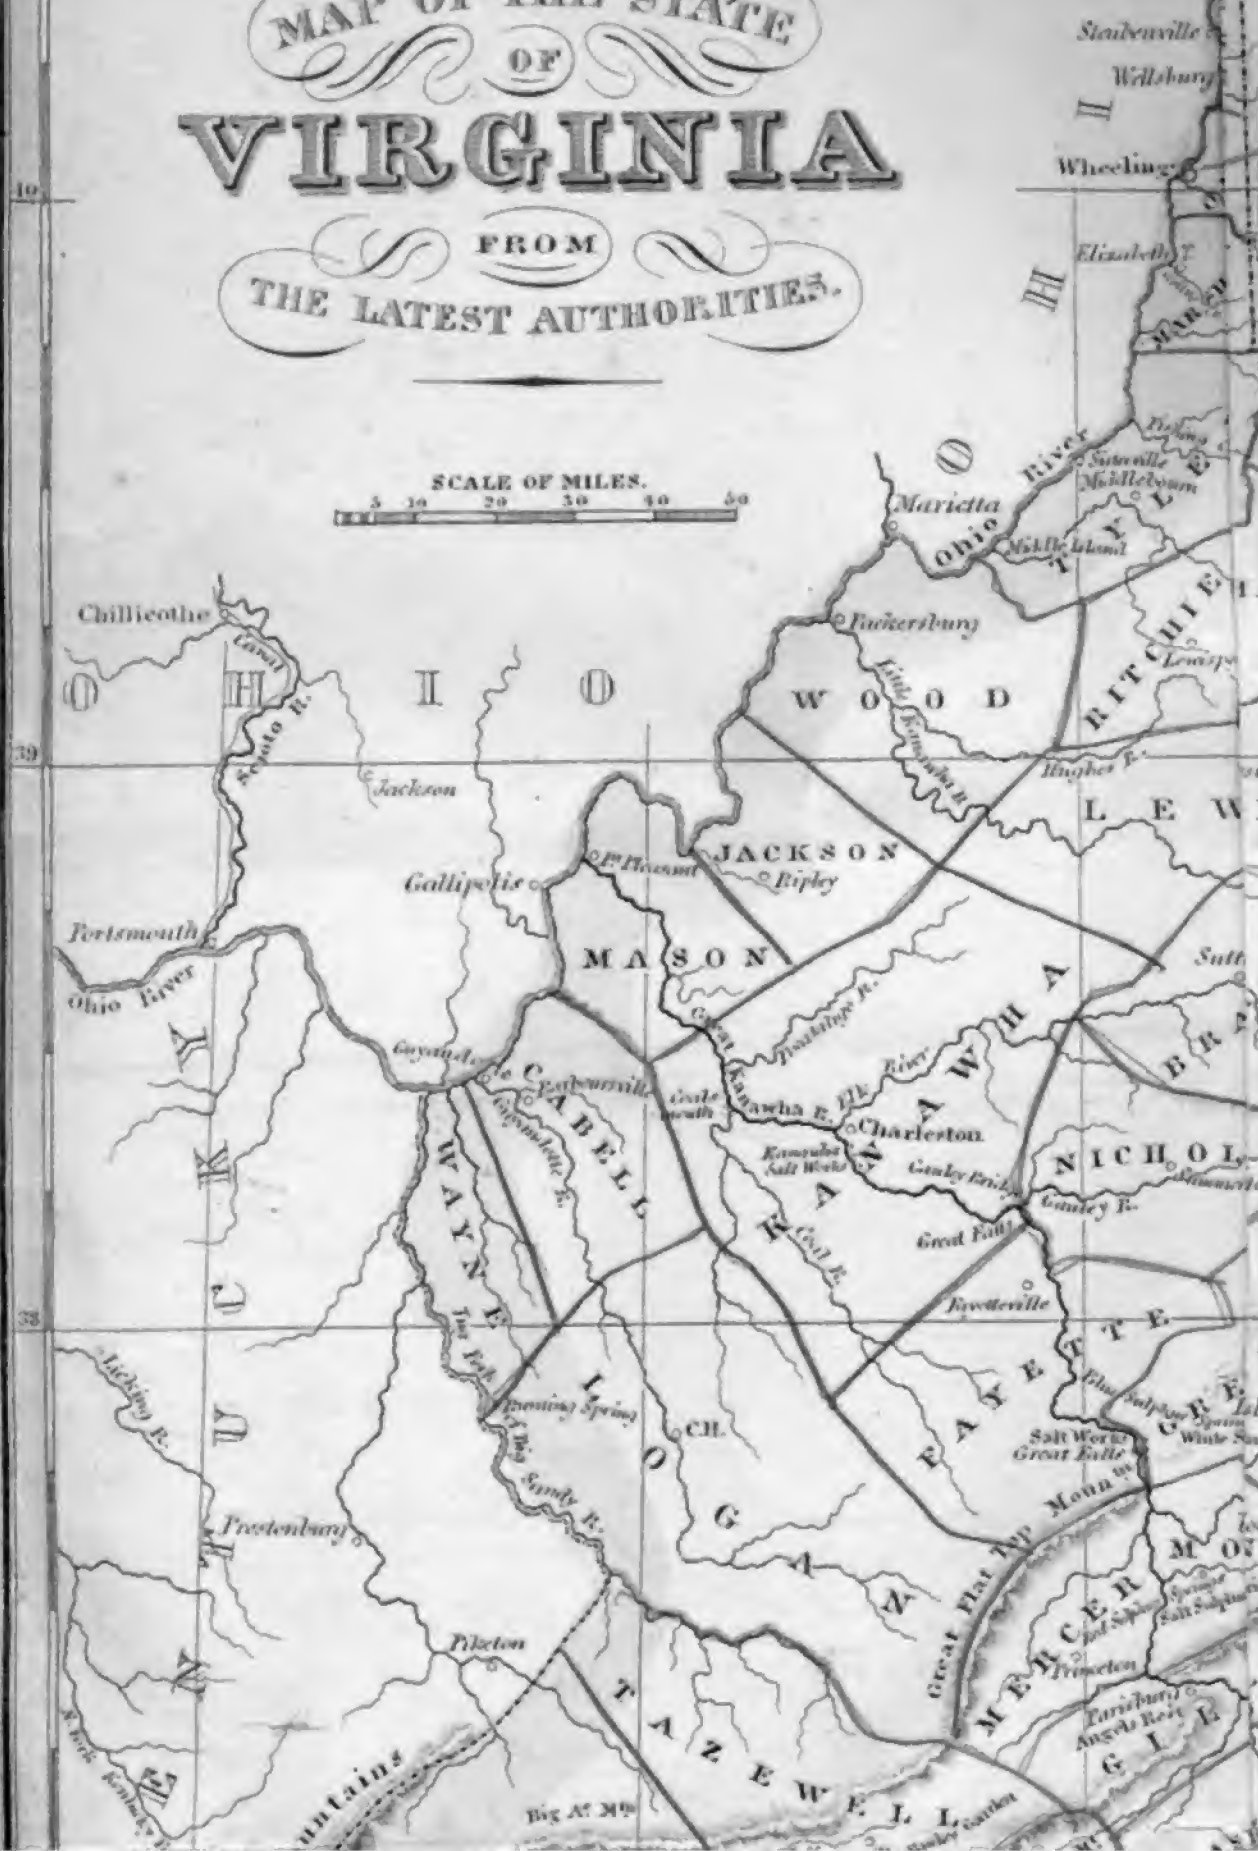

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH.

From a portrait showing him in the fashionable dress of the period in which he lived.

MAP OF THE STATE
OF VIRGINIA

FROM
THE LATEST AUTHORITIES.

SCALE OF MILES.
5 10 20 30 40 50

INDEX.

The counties being arranged in alphabetical order in this work, supersedes the necessity of placing them in the index.

CITIES AND TOWNS.

- | | | |
|-----------------------|------------------------|------------------------|
| Abingdon, 498 | Eastville, 404 | Jeffersonton, 237 |
| Amsterdam, 203 | Edinburg, 467 | Jerusalem, 470 |
| Aldie, 354 | Edom Mills, 460 | Jonesville, 351 |
| Alexandria, 542 | Elizabethtown, 368 | |
| Ayletts, 359 | Elizabeth, 516 | Kempsville, 435 |
| | Estillville, 464 | Keysville, 220 |
| Banister, 290 | | Kilmarnock, 350 |
| Bath, 386 | Fairview, 194 | Kingwood, 432 |
| Bassetville, 389 | Faber's Mills, 388 | |
| Barboursville, 417 | Fairfax, 237 | Lawrenceville, 206 |
| Belville, 516 | Fayetteville, 267 | Lawnsville, 352 |
| Bethany, 194 | Fairmont, 372 | Lafayette, 385 |
| Berryville, 233 | Farmsville, 432 | Lewisville, 206 |
| Berkeley Springs, 386 | Falmouth, 484 | Leesburg, 353 |
| Beverly, 444 | Fairfield, 448 | Leesville, 210 |
| Big Lick, 448 | Fincastle, 202 | Lewisburg, 284 |
| Bowling Green, 215 | Flint Hill, 447 | Lewisport, 301 |
| Boydton, 378 | Frankfort, 284, 291 | Leetown, 334 |
| Blacksville, 382 | Franklin, 428 | Lewiston, 359 |
| Blacksburg, 385 | Fredericksburg, 474 | Leon, 360 |
| Bloomfield, 354 | Front Royal, 497 | Lexington, 448 |
| Brookneal, 210 | | Lebanon, 463 |
| Brucetown, 272 | Gap Mills, 383 | Liberty, 188 |
| Bridgeport, 301 | Gainsboro', 272 | Little Plymouth, 348 |
| Brentsville, 442 | Georgetown, 542 | Liberia, 442 |
| Brownsburg, 448 | Gerardstown, 191 | Loretto, 253 |
| Buchanan, 203 | Gosport, 400 | Lovettsville, 354 |
| Buffalo, 360 | Gordonsville, 417 | Lovingston, 388 |
| | Greenville, 177 | Luray, 425 |
| Cartersville, 237 | Grave Creek, 368 | Lynchburg, 210 |
| Ca Ira, 237 | Granville, 382 | |
| Capeville, 404 | Guyandotte, 209 | Manchester, 229 |
| Centerville, 254, 496 | Gwyn's Island, 376 | Martinsville, 315, 496 |
| Charlottesville, 164 | | Martinsburg, 191 |
| Charlestown, 341 | Hampton, 248 | Marion, 469 |
| Charleston, 343 | Hallsboro', 220 | Maysville, 207 |
| Christiansburg, 385 | Harper's Ferry, 334 | Marysville, 220 |
| Chuckatuck, 386 | Harrisville, 447 | Middlebrook, 177 |
| City Point, 440 | Harrisonburg, 460 | Millboro' Spring, 185 |
| Columbia, 270 | Heathsville, 404 | Millwood, 235 |
| Cold Stream Mill, 291 | Hicksford, 289 | Middletown, 272 |
| Competition, 429 | Hillsboro', 354 | Milford, 301 |
| Clarksburg, 301 | Horntown, 163 | Middleway, 334 |
| Clarksville, 378 | Holliday's Cove, 194 | Millville, 349 |
| | Holtsville, 372 | Middleburg, 353 |
| Darksville, 191 | Huntersville, 430 | Milford, 372 |
| Deep Creek, 400 | | Middletown, 496 |
| Deaton, 460 | Indian Town, 349, 470 | Modist-town, 163 |
| Drummondstown, 163 | Jamestown, 317, 382 | Mount Solon, 177 |
| Dumfries, 442 | Jacksonville, 270, 488 | " Meridian, 177 |
| Dunkirk, 348 | Jefferson, 430 | " Gilead, 354 |

- | | | |
|------------------------|--------------------------|----------------------|
| Mount Crawford, 460 | Princeton, 379 | Terra Salis, 344 |
| Moorefield, 300 | Prunty Town, 487 | Thoroughfare, 442 |
| Montville, 354 | Pungoteague, 163 | Trout Run, 299 |
| Morgantown, 381 | | Trouts' Hill, 506 |
| New Canton, 207 | Ravenswood, 317 | |
| " Glasgow, 176 | Rapid Ann M'g House, 360 | Union, 354, 383 |
| " Baltimore, 262 | Richmond, 303 | Union Hall, 272 |
| " Hope, 177 | Ripley, 317 | Urbanna, 379 |
| " London, 210 | Rocky Mount, 272 | Upperville, 261 |
| " Manchester, 194 | Romney, 290 | |
| " Market, 388, 467 | Rough Creek Ch., 220 | Warm Springs, 184 |
| Newbern, 443 | | Warwick, 229 |
| Newtown, 272, 348 | Salem, 447 | Waynesboro', 177 |
| Newport, 372 | Saltville, 469 | Warrenton, 261 |
| Norfolk, 394 | Scottsville, 164 | Wardensville, 291 |
| | Scottsville, 430 | Waterford, 354 |
| | Shinnstown, 301 | Washington, 447 |
| Occoquan, 442 | Sistersville, 496 | Washington City, 534 |
| Old Point Comfort, 252 | Shepherdstown, 336 | Wellsburg, 194 |
| | Somerville, 262 | Weston, 351 |
| Pattonsburg, 203 | Smithfield, 315, 382 | West Union, 368 |
| Palmyra, 270 | Smithville, 430 | Westville, 376 |
| Parisburg, 278 | Snickersville, 354 | West Liberty, 407 |
| Paddytown, 291 | Spring Hill, 177 | White Post, 235 |
| Palatine, 372 | Sperryville, 447 | Whitehall, 272 |
| Parkersburg, 516 | Staunton, 177 | Wheeling, 407 |
| Petersburg, 242 | Stephensburg, 272 | Winchester, 272 |
| Peterstown, 383 | Stevensburg, 237 | Williamsburg, 321 |
| Philippi, 187 | Strasburg, 467 | Williamsport, 487 |
| Philmont, 354 | Suffolk, 386 | Woodstock, 467 |
| Point Pleasant, 360 | Summerville, 392 | Woodville, 447 |
| Port Royal, 215 | Sutton, 193 | Wytheville, 514 |
| " Conway, 349 | | |
| " Republic, 460 | Tappahannoc, 253 | Yorktown, 519 |
| Portsmouth, 400 | Taylorsville, 427 | |

GENERAL OR OUTLINE HISTORY.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION—PROGRESS OF COMMERCE—ROANOKE SETTLEMENTS.

Discovery of America.—England.—Want of commerce in early times.—Voyages of the Cabots.—Progress of English discovery.—Frobisher—Gilbert—Baleigh.—Failure of the Roanoke settlements. Page 11

CHAPTER II.

SETTLEMENT AT JAMES TOWN—SUFFERINGS OF THE COLONIES—ADVENTURES OF SMITH.

New company raised—its charter.—James Town.—Machinations against Smith.—Difficulties of the colony.—Smith taken prisoner—his release.—Arrival of Newport.—Discovery of earth believed to be gold.—Departure of Newport.—Survey of the Chesapeake and its waters by Smith.—Smith made president.—Second arrival of Newport.—Judicious conduct of Smith.—New charter.—New arrival of emigrants.—Badness of the selection.—New settlements.—Accident to Smith—his departure—his character. Page 21

CHAPTER III.

PROGRESS OF THE COLONY—MASSACRE OF 1622—DISSOLUTION OF THE LONDON COMPANY.

State of the colony at Smith's departure—its conduct and subsequent sufferings.—Arrival of Gates—of Lord De La Ware—his departure.—Arrival of Dale.—Martial law.—Gates governor.—Grants of land to individuals.—New charter.—Marriage of Pocahontas.—Friendly relations with the Indians.—Cultivation of tobacco.—Tenure of lands.—Tyranny of Argall.—Propriety of reform in the government.—Yeardley governor.—First colonial assembly in 1619.—Introduction of women.—Introduction of negroes by the Dutch in 1620.—Constitution brought over by Sir Francis Wyatt.—Relations with the Indians.—Massacre of the 22d of March, 1622—its consequences.—Struggles between the king and the company.—Commissioners sent to Virginia.—Firmness of the Virginians.—Dissolution of the company. Page 34

CHAPTER IV.

PROGRESS OF THE COLONY FROM THE DISSOLUTION OF THE LONDON COMPANY TO THE BREAKING OUT OF BACON'S REBELLION IN 1675.

Accession of Charles I.—Tobacco trade.—Yeadley governor—his commission favorable—his death and character.—Lord Baltimore's reception.—State of religion—legislation upon the subject.—Invitation to the Puritans to settle on Delaware Bay.—Harvey governor.—Grant of Carolina and Maryland.—Harvey deposed.—restored.—Wyatt governor.—Acts of the legislature improperly censured.—Berkeley governor.—Indian relations.—Opechancanough prisoner—his death.—Change of government in England.—Fleet and army sent to reduce Virginia.—Preparation for defence by Berkeley.—Agreement entered into between the colony and the commissioners of the commonwealth.—Indian hostilities.—Matthews elected governor.—Difficulties between the governor and the legislature—adjusted.—State of the colony and its trade.—Commissioners sent to England.—The Restoration.—General legislation..... Page 51

CHAPTER V.

BACON'S REBELLION—HOSTILE DESIGNS OF THE FRENCH.

Indifference to change in England.—Navigation Act.—Convicts.—Conspiracy detected.—Discontents.—Cessation from tobacco planting for one year.—Royal grants.—Virginia's remonstrance.—Success of deputies.—Indian hostilities.—Army raised and disbanded by governor.—People petition for an army—elect Bacon commander—he marches without commission and defeats Indians—pursued by governor, who retreats on hearing of rising at Jamestown.—Governor makes concessions.—Bacon prisoner—is pardoned.—People force commission from governor.—Bacon marches to meet Indians—hears he is declared a rebel by Berkeley—marches to meet him—he flees to Accomac.—Convention called and free government established.—Bacon defeats the Indians.—Berkeley obtains possession of the shipping, and occupies Jamestown—is besieged by Bacon, and driven out.—Jamestown burnt.—Death of Bacon—character of his enterprise.—Predatory warfare—treaty between governor and his opponents.—Cruelty of Berkeley.—King's commissioners.—Departure of Berkeley and his death.—Acts of Assembly passed during Bacon's influence.—Conduct of king's commissioners.—Culpeper governor.—Discontents.—Conduct of Beverly.—Howard governor.—General conduct of Virginia and progress of affairs.—Plan of Collier for dividing the British colonies..... Page 60

CHAPTER VI.

EVENTS FROM THE YEAR 1705 TO THE TERMINATION OF THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR.

Gov. Nicholson superseded by Nott, and he by Jennings.—Administration of Gov. Spotswood.—Drysdale governor—succeeded by Gooch.—Death of Rev. James Blair.—Notice of Col. William Byrd.—Gooch's charge to the grand jury against Presbyterians, Methodists, &c.—Burning of the capitol at Williamsburg.—Revision of the colonial laws.—Departure of Gooch.—Dinwiddie governor.—Encroachments of the French.—Mission of George Washington beyond the Alleghanies to the French commandant of a fort—its inauspicious results.—Gov. Dinwiddie prepares to repel the encroachments of the French.—Expedition against them under Col. Fry, and the erection of Fort Duquesne.—Washington's skirmish with Jumonville—he erects Fort Necessity—he surrenders to the French, and marches back to Virginia.—The Burgesses pass a vote of thanks to him.—Gov. Dinwiddie resolves to prosecute the war—the futility of his projects.—Arrival of Gen. Braddock.—Braddock's defeat.—Bravery of Washington and the Virginia troops.—Frontiers open to incursions from the savages.—Fauquier governor.—Troops destined for the conquest of Duquesne rendezvous at Raystown.—Defeat of Major Grant, and heroism of Captain Bullet.—Fort Duquesne evacuated.—End of the war..... Page 88

CHAPTER VII.

FROM THE TERMINATION OF THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR TO THE SURRENDER OF CORNWALLIS.

Encroachments of Britain upon the American colonies.—Spirited conduct of Virginia thereon.—Patrick Henry's resolution on the right to tax America.—Death of Governor Fauquier.—Arrival of Lord Botetourt.—Continued aggressions of the mother country.—Death of Botetourt.—Lord Dunmore governor.—Dunmore's war.—Battle of Point Pleasant.—Speech of Logan.—End of the Indian war.—Meeting of the Continental Congress.—Dunmore removes the gunpowder of the colony from the magazine at Williamsburg.—Patrick Henry forces the receiver-general to make compensation.—Dunmore flees on board the Fowey man-of-war.—Meeting of the Virginia Convention.—Dunmore, with the British fleet, attacks Hampton.—Affair in Princess Anne.—Defeat of the enemy at Great Bridge.—Norfolk burnt.—Delegates in Congress instructed by the General Convention of Virginia to propose the Declaration of Independence.—A constitution for the state government adopted.—Patrick Henry governor.—Dunmore driven from Gwynn's Island.—First meeting of the legislature under the state constitution.—Indian war.—Col. Christian makes peace with the Creek and Cherokee nations.—Revision of the state laws.—Glance at the war at the north.—Sir Henry Clinton appointed commander-in-chief of the British army.—He transfers the seat of the war to the south.—Sir George Collier, with a British fleet, enters Hampton Roads.—Fort Nelson abandoned.—The enemy take possession of Portsmouth, and burn Suffolk.—They embark for New York.—Gen. Leslie invades Virginia, and lands at Portsmouth.—The government prepares to resist the enemy.—Leslie leaves Virginia.—Arnold invades Virginia, lands at Westover, and marches to Richmond.—He returns to Westover, and arrives at Portsmouth.—Washington forms a plan to cut off his retreat.—Clinton detaches Gen. Phillips to the assistance of Arnold.—Defenceless situation of Virginia.—Phillips takes possession of Petersburg, and commits depredations in the vicinity.—Death of Gen. Phillips.—Cornwallis enters Petersburg.—Tarleton's expedition to Charlottesville.—Various movements of the two armies.—Cornwallis concentrates his army at York and Gloucester.—Surrender of Cornwallis..... Page 104

CHAPTER VIII.

FROM THE CLOSE OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION TO THE PRESENT TIME.

End of the war.—Action of the Virginia Convention upon the federal constitution.—Origin of the Federal and Democratic parties.—Opposition to the alien and sedition laws in Virginia.—Report of Mr. Madison thereon.—War of 1812.—Revision of the state constitution in 1829-30.—Action of Virginia upon the subject of slavery in 1831-2.—Policy of the state in reference to internal improvement and education..... Page 123

MISCELLANIES.

	Page		Page
ACADEMY, the first in the valley of Va.....	434	Dodridge, Rev. J., work of.....	198
Allen's Cave.....	467	Dunmore's palace.....	328
Anecdotes, revolutionary.....	290 330
Ann, Mad, notice of.....	173	Early settlers, customs of in sw. Va.....	198 372
Archer, Col. Wm.....	173	Eastern shore described.....	404
Archer, Dr. B. T.....	431	" monumental inscription on.....	405
Arnold.....	243 303 390	Eggleston, Major.....	174
Ashley, Gen. Wm. H.....	431	Emory and Henry College.....	498
Austin, Stephen, birthplace of.....	515	Emigration to Va. from the North.....	234
		Episcopal church, first in valley of Va.....	273
Bacon's Castle.....	486	Episcopal Theological Seminary.....	543
Baptist, warrior parson.....	238	Eulen's leap.....	366
" preacher confined at Fairfax.....	230
Baptists, history and persecutions of.....	379	Fairfax, Lord.....	235 275
" college of.....	312 487 539	" stone.....	300
Banks, Llan.....	360	Foreman, Capt., defeat of.....	368
Barbour, Gov.....	424	Forryth, Hon. John.....	484
" Judge.....	424	Fort Donnally, attack on.....	287
Baylor, Col.....	293	" Henry, siege of.....	409
Blackburn, Gen.....	186	" London.....	274
Blannerhasset, notice of.....	516	" Nelson, abandoned.....	399
Bland, Col. Theodorick.....	440	" Rice, attack of.....	201
" Richard.....	441	" Savannah.....	285
Blind Prescher.....	350	" Seybert, massacre at.....	428
Blind, institution for the.....	179	" Young.....	172
Blowing Cave.....	185	" at Point Pleasant.....	366
Boutmen, life of.....	496	Ports of early settlers described.....	201
Bocker, Wonder, longevity of.....	435	Fortification, ancient.....	270
Bottetourt, Lord.....	326	Francisco, Peter.....	297
Brady, Capt. Samuel.....	200
Braxton, Carter.....	348	Garden, the Devil's.....	300
Bark, the historian.....	248	Gates, Gen.....	192
Buffalo Knob.....	270	German settlers, customs of.....	461
Bursted Rock, the.....	428	Germanna, ancient town of.....	475
		Giles, Gov.....	170
" Campbellites," sketch and college of.....	193	Gilmer, F. W.....	165 265
Campbell, Col. Arthur, biography of.....	503	Gigantic race, relics of a.....	469
" Gen. Wm.....	504	Girardin, the historian.....	248
Carrington, Judge Paul.....	220	Glass windows, the.....	444
Carr, Dabney.....	238	Grundy, Hon. Felix.....	193
Candy's Castle.....	292	Greenbrier, early settlements in.....	285
Catholic Colleges.....	312 542	Grayson, Hon. Wm.....	442
Census of 1840.....	160	Graham, Rev. W., anecdotes of.....	455
Certificates, revolutionary.....	240	Great Bridge, battle of.....	297
Church, the Established, abolition of.....	142	Gwyn's Island, battle at.....	376
Church, ancient.....	234 247 255 311 315 317 342 381
Champo, Sergeant.....	332	Harrison, President.....	218
City, ancient, relics of an.....	299	" Hon. Benj.....	218
Clay, Henry.....	293	Hanging Rocks, battle near.....	292
Clarke, Gen. Geo. Rogers.....	234	Hampden Sidney College.....	433
" Gen. Wm.....	234	Henry, Patrick.....	213 220 295
Coal Mines of Eastern Va.....	230	Helphinstine, Major.....	273
Columbian College.....	539	Henrico, origin of its name.....	362
Convention, troops of.....	105	Hoge, Rev. M.....	434
Convention of 1788 and 1829-30.....	312	Houston, President.....	435
Cornstalk, murder of.....	364	Horses, wild.....	163
Country, description of, on the Big Sandy.....	506	Hughs, Jesse, anecdotes of.....	301
Craney Island, attack on.....	463	Huguenot settlement.....	431
Crawford, Col.....	193
Cunningham, Capt. Wm.....	251	Ice Mountain.....	231
Culpeper minute-men.....	237	Indian incursions.....	173 204 278 286
Cyclopean Towers.....	180	Indian graves.....	426
		" mounds.....	350 426
Dale, Commodore.....	463	" relics.....	300
Dan, the passage of.....	427	Indians, ancient, of Va.....	125
Darke, Gen.....	340	" relics of in eastern Va.....	349 470
Davies, Rev. Samuel.....	293	" skirmish with.....	300
Davison, J., anecdote of.....	435	Insane and idiotic persons, number of in Va.....	179
Deaf and Dumb.....	179
Declaration of Independence at Richmond.....	313	James City, battles in.....	319
Dick Pointer, heroism of.....	287	Jefferson, President.....	168 214
Dismal Swamp.....	401	Jefferson's Rock.....	335
Dodridge, Philip, anecdotes of.....	197	Joe Logston, anecdotes of.....	445

	Page		Page
Johnsons, intrepidity of.....	416	Petersburg volunteers.....	145
Johnson, Judge Peter.....	505	Pendleton, Edmund.....	215
Kanawha, falls of.....	267	Phillips, the tory.....	438
" salt works.....	344	Phillips, Gen., death of.....	244
" gas wells.....	346	Pocahontas basin.....	248
" pictured rocks at.....	346	" place where she rescued Capt. Smith.....	282
Kenton, Gen. Simon.....	267	Poes, the bravery of.....	414
Laws, ancient.....	150	Point Pleasant, battle of.....	361 366
Law, Lynch, origin of.....	212	" song on.....	366
Lead Mines of Wythe.....	515	Powell's Fort Valley.....	426
Lee, Gen. Charles.....	191	Point of Fork, invasion of.....	271
" Francis Lightfoot.....	511	Pleasants, Gov.....	283
" Gov.....	511	Preaching, the first in western Va.....	192
" Richard Henry.....	510	Presbyterian clergyman, the first in America ..	293
Lewis, Meriwether.....	171	Princess Ann, skirmish in.....	438
" Gen. Andrew.....	204	Prince William, military events in the vicinity.....	442
" Charles.....	182 362	Quakers, persecution of.....	151 354
" family.....	181	Randolph, John of Roanoke.....	223 440
" Colonel Fielding.....	492	" Edmund.....	313
Life in western Va.....	152	" Peyton.....	333
" in eastern Va.....	156	" Macon College.....	378
Longevity, list of remarkable cases of.....	148	Reminiscences, revolutionary.....	243
Long Island, battle of.....	501	River, the lost.....	300
Littlepage, Lewis.....	483	Richmond Theatre, the burning of.....	309
Lucas family.....	279	" invasion of.....	305
Lunatic Asylum.....	178 321	Roberdeau, Gen. D.....	275
Luray, cave at.....	425	Rice, Dr. J. H.....	434
M'Nutt, Gov.....	450	Rumsey, the first steamboat inventor.....	336
Mad Ann.....	172	Salt, fossil.....	402
Mason, George.....	260	Scotch-Irish, settlements of.....	451
Marshall, John.....	202 275	Scott, Gen. Charles.....	244
Marshall's Pillar.....	268	" Major Joseph.....	242
Massie, Gen. N.....	283	" Gen. Winfield.....	248
Marriages, poetical notices of.....	332	Scenery of the valley of Va.....	456
Madison, D. D., James.....	333	Settlements, early, in sw. Va.....	189 382 444
Madison, President.....	422	" " in sw. Va.....	450
Mammoth mound.....	370	Simcoe, skirmishes of.....	217 271 290 306 319
Matoaca, inscriptions at.....	229	Shedley, Daniel.....	179
Medical Colleges.....	312 539	Spring, Augusta.....	177
Mercer, Gen. H.....	480	" Alum.....	450
Meredith, Capt.....	251	" Blue Sulphur.....	289
Monumental Inscriptions at Hampton.....	249	" Bottetourt.....	448
" " oldest in Virginia.....	261	" Dagger's.....	203
" " at Turkey Island.....	312	" Fauquier.....	262
" " at Norfolk.....	306	" Grayson.....	216
" " at York.....	521 523	" Holston.....	464
" " at Washington.....	540	" Hygeian.....	278
Morgan, Gen. D.....	233 276	" Howard.....	430
" anecdote of.....	515	" Jordan.....	272
Moore family, captivity and murder of.....	429	" Orkney.....	467
Moore's Lamentation, a song.....	495	" Red.....	385
Moore, Hon. A.....	456	" Salt Sulphur.....	384
Moore house.....	530	" Shannondale.....	342
Monroe, President.....	326	" Sweet.....	384
Muhlenburg, Gen. P.....	468	" White Sulphur of Greenbrier.....	288
Natural Pillars.....	278	Slavery and tobacco.....	133
" Bridge.....	457	Slaughter, Capt.....	237
" Tunnel.....	464	Southampton Insurrection.....	471
Negro duel.....	351	Spotswood, Gov., visit to the family of.....	476
Nelson family, seat of.....	295	Statistics of 1840.....	160
" Gov.....	522	Stephens, Gen.....	191
Newspapers, first in Va.....	331	Stevens, Gen. E.....	240
Norfolk, burning of.....	308	Stockton, Isabella, romantic courtship of.....	192
Obituary.....	148	Suffolk, burning of.....	387
Old Church.....	520	Superstition, anecdotes illustrating it at the present day.....	500
" Capitol.....	305 329	Summers, Judge.....	347
" Dominion, origin of the name.....	131	Stone structure, ancient, on Ware creek.....	391
" magazine.....	398	Tarleton, Col.....	166 212
" Raleigh tavern.....	330	Taylor, Col. John.....	215
O'Hara, Gen., anecdote of.....	245	" Geo. Keith.....	440
Opechancanough's residence.....	349	Tea-table, the.....	292
Page, Gov.....	281	Thurston, Col., the warrior parson.....	234 283
Parson Cummings, anecdote of.....	499	Tories, the hanging of.....	358
Pass of the James.....	176	" Insurrection of.....	301
Peter Wright, the hunter.....	172	Trough-Hill, battle of.....	300
Peaks of Otter.....	189	Tyler, Judge.....	219
		" President.....	219 327

	Page		Page
Univerdty of Virginia.....	165	Washington, likeness of at Harper's Ferry....	335
Uncle Jack, the negro preacher.....	174	" his recommendation of Volney ..	261
Union Theological Seminary.....	434	" aged servant of.....	184
Upshur, Hon. A. P.....	403	" fac-simile of his writing.....	509
		" " of the entry of his birth	509
Van Bebbers, anecdotes of the.....	366	" birthplace of.....	507
Virginia, general view of.....	128	" Lord Brougham's sketch of the
" Governors.....	145	character of.....	508
" Military Institute.....	449	" Judge Bushrod.....	513
Virginians in high official stations under the		" Col. William	484
United States.....	146	Weyer's Cave.....	183
Virginians, Jones's description of.....	330	Weddings of early settlers	198
		Westover, the seat of Col. Byrd.....	217
Waddel, James, the blind preacher.....	417	Weems, Parson.....	255
Washington, marriage and courtship of.....	399	Weitzel, Lewis	413
" his office at Soldier's Rest.....	233	Weedon, Gen.....	450
" entry of as surveyor.....	237	Wirt, William.....	171
" anecdotes of.....	241	William and Mary College.....	324
" residence of at Mt. Vernon.....	257	Witchcraft, trial for.....	436
" statue of	308	Woodford, Gen. Wm.....	215
" modesty of.....	329	Wolf-pits, construction of.....	206
" mother of.....	483	Wythe, George.....	352
" college.....	449
" farm.....	482	Zane, Elizabeth, herdism of.....	411

OUTLINE

HISTORY OF VIRGINIA.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION, PROGRESS OF COMMERCE, ROANOKE SETTLEMENTS.

Discovery of America.—England.—Want of Commerce in early times.—Voyages of the Cabots.—Progress of English discovery—Frobisher—Gilbert—Raleigh.—Failure of the Roanoke settlements.

THE claims of the Icelanders, the Welsh, and even the Norwegians,* to the discovery of America, seem in modern times to be universally set aside in favor of a native of a milder clime. Indeed, the evidence by which their respective claims were sought to be established was so vague, contradictory, and unsatisfactory,† and their discoveries, if proved, so entirely accidental, and useless to mankind, that it is not at all astonishing that all the merit should be given to that individual whose brilliant genius first demonstrated a priori the existence of a continent in the western waters, and whose adventurous daring‡ led him to risk his life in the search of a world, of the existence of which he was only informed by his science, with little aid of any human experience; or that posterity should give to COLUMBUS the undivided glory of an exploit for which he received only the ignominy of his contemporaries, and to Italy the honor due the birthplace of so distinguished a son, from whose brilliant achievements she has received little else.

In 1460, the Portuguese discovered the Cape de Verd islands, and afterwards extended their discoveries farther south. This near prospect of an easier and more direct route to India, had already begun to excite the jealousy of the Venetians, who then nearly monopolized the trade of India, and to elevate the hopes of the Portuguese, who expected to enjoy a portion of the wealth and luxury which the Venetians derived from that trade; when the minds of both, and indeed of all Europe, were turned in another

* Winterbotham's America, vol. I. p. 1 and 2, and Hinton's United States.

† Bancroft's Hist. U. States, vol. I. p. 6, and notes.

‡ "L'Italie reparut, avec les divins trésors que les Grecs fugitifs rapportèrent dans son sein; le ciel lui révéla ses lois; l'audace de ses enfants découvrit un nouvel hémisphère."—De Staël—Corinne.

direction by the occurrence of an event in the history of maritime discovery, compared with which all others sunk into insignificance.

This event was the discovery of America, by Christopher Columbus. The education of this daring mariner, his appointments and dangers, his difficulties and his brilliant success, or the melancholy story of his sad reverses, and the example afforded in him of the ingratitude of kings, it is not the purpose of the writer to narrate. He refrains from recounting so temptingly interesting a narrative, because it would lead him too far from his purpose, which is only to narrate succinctly the progress of navigation and discovery to the time of the first colony settled in Virginia,—and because the same story has been so well told by Robertson, Irving, and others, that it ought to be familiar to all.

Notwithstanding the advances in navigation which have been enumerated, the art of ship-building was still in such a rude and imperfect state, that the vessels in which Columbus embarked on an unknown sea, a modern mariner, with all the advantages of modern science, would scarcely venture in, to cross the Atlantic. The largest was a vessel of no considerable burden,* and the two others scarcely superior in burden to large boats, and the united crews of the three only amounted to ninety men, including officers, and a few gentlemen, adventurers from Isabella's court.

But notwithstanding these inadequate means for the prosecution of maritime discovery, the ardor of enterprise was so much excited by the brilliant achievements of Columbus, the greedy thirst for gain, and hope of finding some country abounding in gold, together with the eager desire which still prevailed of discovering some passage through the great continent of America, which might lead to India, that in twenty-six years from the first discovery of land by Columbus, the Spaniards had visited all of the islands of the West Indies—they had sailed on the eastern coast of America from the Rio de la Plata to the western extremity of the Mexican Gulf—they had discovered the great Southern Ocean, and had acquired considerable knowledge of the coast of Florida. It is also said that these voyages in search of a nearer passage to the East Indies, had extended much farther north, but not however until that country had been discovered by the seamen of another nation, of whose exploits in the field of maritime adventure we shall presently speak.

The great interior was still unknown, the whole western and the extreme southeastern coasts were still undiscovered, and the long line of coast from Florida to Labrador had only been seen, and touched upon in a few places.

England did not at an early period make those advances in navigation, to which the eminent advantages of her insular situation invited, and gave no promise of that maritime distinction, and commercial wealth, to which the wise policy of her subsequent rulers have led her to attain. From the times of the conquest to the discovery of America, England had been engaged in perpetual wars, either foreign or domestic; and thus, while the southern portion of Europe and the free cities on the Rhine were advancing so rapidly in opulence and power, England was destitute of even the germ of that naval strength to which she is so much indebted for her present greatness. Every article of foreign growth or fabric which she consumed, was wafted to her shores in the barks of other nations, and the subsequent mistress of the seas scarcely dared to float her flag beyond the limits of her own narrow jurisdiction. Scarcely an English ship traded with Spain or Portugal before the beginning of the fifteenth century, and it required another half century to give the British mariner courage enough to venture to the east of the Pillars of Hercules.*

* Robertson—Hist. America, 49.

Feeble as the marine of England then was, her reigning monarch, Henry VII., did not lack the spirit required for undertaking great enterprises, and accident only deprived him of the glory of being the patron of the discoverer of America. Columbus, after the failure of his own native country of Genoa to encourage his great enterprise, and his second rebuff from his adopted country, Portugal, fearing another refusal from the king of Castile, to whose court he then directed his steps, dispatched his brother Bartholomew to England to solicit the aid of Henry VII., who being then at peace, was supposed to have leisure to undertake a great enterprise which promised such renown to himself and emolument to England. Bartholomew was captured by pirates on his voyage, and robbed of all his effects, which, with an illness that followed, prevented him from presenting himself at court, after he arrived in England, until he could provide himself with suitable apparel Feb. 13, 1488.† by his skill in drawing maps and sea-charts. He brought himself to the notice of Henry by presenting him with a map, and upon his representing to him the proposal of Columbus, he accepted it with "a joyful countenance, and bade him fetch his brother." So much delay had been produced by the circumstances mentioned, that Bartholomew, hastening to Castile, learned at Paris, from Charles, king of France, that his brother Christopher's efforts had already been crowned with the most brilliant success.

When we reflect upon the difficulties which were thrown in the way of Columbus at the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, even after they became convinced of the practicability of his scheme,

* Robertson's Virginia, p. 18, 19.

† This date is preserved in some curious verses upon the map, of which we give a specimen: "Bartholmew Colon de Terra Rubra." "The yeere of Grace, a thousand and four hundred and fourscore" "And eight, and on the thirteenth day of February more," "In London published this worke. To Christ all laud therefore." Hacklyt, vol. III p. 22.

and the yet more arduous difficulties which he encountered on his voyage, from the mutinous timidity of his crew, we may well doubt whether Henry's courage would have sustained him in the actual accomplishment of the enterprise, or whether England at that time afforded mariners sufficiently hardy to have persevered a sufficient length of time in a seemingly endless voyage upon an unknown sea.

Fortunately, perhaps, for mankind, the courage of England was not put to the test of making the first great adventure; and whether she would have succeeded in that or not, she was not destitute of sufficient courage to undertake an enterprise of very considerable magnitude at that day, soon after the existence of land in our western hemisphere had been discovered.

The merit of this new enterprise is also due to a native of Italy, and his motive was the same which prevailed in most of the adventures of the time,—the desire to discover a new route to India.

Giovanni Gaboto, better known by his anglicised name of John Cabot, a Venetian merchant who had settled at Bristol, obtained from Henry a charter for himself and his three sons, Lewis, Sebastian, and Santius, allowing them full power and authority to sail into all places in the eastern, western, or northern sea, under the banners of England, with five ships, at their own proper costs and charges, to discover countries before unknown to Christians, to plant the banners of England in all such places, and to take possession of them, to hold as vassals of England, to have the exclusive monopoly of the trade of all such places, paying to the king one-fifth of the clear profits of every voyage. All other persons were prohibited from visiting such places, and the Cabots were bound always to land on their return only at Bristol.

Under this patent, containing "the worst features of colonial monopoly and commercial restriction," John Cabot, and his celebrated son Sebastian, embarked for the west. The object of Cabot being to discover the passage to India, he pursued a course more northwardly than any selected by previous navigators, and the first land he reached was the coast of Newfoundland, which on that account he named Prima Vista; next the Island of St. John; and finally the continent, among the "polar bears, the rude savages and dismal cliffs of Labrador;" and this seems to have been the only fruit of the first British voyage to America.

In the following year a new patent was given to John Cabot, Feb. 3, 1498. and the enterprise was conducted by his adventurous and distinguished son, Sebastian. In this expedition, which was undertaken for the purposes of trade as well as discovery, several merchants of London took part, and even the king himself. Cabot sailed in a northwest course, in hopes of finding a northwest passage to India, as far probably as the 58th or 60th degree of latitude, until he was stopped by the quantities of ice which he encountered, and the extreme severity of the weather; he then turned his course southward and followed the coast, according to some writers to the coast of Virginia, and in the opinion of some, as far as the coast of Florida. The only commodities with which he returned to England, as far as our accounts inform us, were three of the natives of the newly discovered countries. He found, upon his return, the king immersed in his preparations for a war with Scotland, which prevented his engaging in any further prosecution of his discoveries, or entertaining any design of settlement.

It is not our purpose to notice the Portuguese discoveries under Cotereal, the French under Verrazzani and Cartier, or their abortive attempt at settlements in Canada and New England. Nor shall we notice the extensive inland expedition of the Spaniards under Soto from Florida, through the states of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, across the Mississippi, and into Louisiana,—or the attempts of the French at settlement in Florida and the Carolinas,—these matters belong rather to the history of the United States, than to the sketch of the history of Virginia which we propose to give. We pass at once to the British attempts at colonization in America.

The progress of maritime adventure extended rapidly. The evidence exists of several English voyages having been made not only to the coast of North America, but the Levant, the harbors of northern Africa and Brazil. The visits to the fisheries 1548. of Newfoundland had become frequent; and the commerce from that source had become of such importance, and had been the subject of such long and oppressive exactions, as to require the action of parliament for their prohibition.

India was still the great object with the merchants, and the discovery of a nearer passage than that offered by the Cape 1550. of Good Hope, the great desideratum with mariners. The northwestern passage had been attempted thrice by the Cabots in vain; a northeastern expedition was fitted out, and sailed under the command of Willoughby and Chancellor. Willoughby with his ship's company were found in their vessel frozen to death in a Lapland harbor; Chancellor with his vessel entered the port of 1554. Archangel, and "discovered" the vast empire of Russia, till then unknown to Western Europe. This discovery led to the hope of establishing an intercourse by means of caravans 1568. across the continent to Persia, and thence to the distant empire of Cathay.

Elizabeth afforded every encouragement to the maritime enterprises of her subjects, and especially encouraged the newly established intercourse with Russia. The hope of discovering a 1576. northwest passage was by no means as yet relinquished. Martin Frobisher, after revolving in his mind the subject for fifteen years, believed that it might be accomplished, and "determined and resolved within himself to go and make full proof thereof," "knowing this to be the only thing in the world that was left yet undone, whereby a notable mind might be made famous and fortunate." Frobisher was too poor to supply himself with the means of carrying his designs into execution; but after much solicitation at court he was patronised by Dudley, Earl of Warwick, who supplied him with two small barks, the one of twenty and the other of twenty-five tons burden, and a pinnace of ten tons. With this little fleet he set sail. The expedition was entirely unfortunate. One of his barks deserted and returned home, the pinnace went down in a storm, "whereby he lost only four men:" with such small vessels and crews did the hardy mariners of that day venture to cross the Atlantic. The Admiral's mast was sprung, and the top-mast blown overboard, by the same storm in which he lost the pinnace; but, nothing daunted, he persevered, and entered Hudson's Bay. The only thing accomplished by the voyage was the taking possession of the cold and barren wilderness in the name of Elizabeth, carrying home some of the gravel and stones, one of the latter of which, resembling gold, or probably having some gold artificially mingled with it after it reached London, caused the gold refiners nearly to go mad, and the merchants to undertake one of the wildest expeditions recorded in the annals of discovery; besides this show of gold, which was pronounced very rich for the quantity, the only other acquisition was a poor native, whose simplicity was imposed upon by the most treacherous devices, until he was decoyed to the English vessel, and then seized by force, and carried away from his friends. He bit off his tongue from despair, and died soon after his arrival in England, from cold taken on the voyage.

The mania which the story of the little bit of gold produced in London caused a fleet of several vessels to be fitted out, of 1577. which the queen herself furnished one, to bring home the rich produce of these icy mines. The ships returned with black earth, but no gold.

The spirit of avarice was not to be stopped in her career by a single failure; a new fleet of fifteen vessels was fitted out, 1578. and to Martin Frobisher was given the command. A colony was to be planted for the purpose of working the mines, while twelve vessels were to be sent home with ore. After almost incredible difficulties, encountered amid storms and "mountains of floating ice on every side," the loss of some vessels, and the desertion of others, they reached the northern Potosi, and the ships were well laden with the black earth; but the colonists, being disheartened by their hardships, declined settling on the coast, and all returned to England. We are not informed of the value of the proceeds of the cargo.

While the British queen and her merchants were indulging themselves in fancies as brilliant and as evanescent as the icebergs which encumbered the scene of the delusion, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, a man of insuperable energy and fearless enterprise, formed a design of promoting the fisheries, and engaging in useful colonization.

With this view he obtained a patent of the same character with June 11, 1578. most of those which were granted to the early promoters of colonization in America, conferring unbounded privileges upon the proprietor, and guarantying no rights to the colonists. The first expedition, in which Gilbert had 1579. expended much of his private fortune, failed,—from what cause is uncertain.

The second expedition, undertaken four years afterwards, was 1583. still more unfortunate; for it lost to the world the gallant and accomplished projector of the expedition. Five vessels sailed from Plymouth on Tuesday, the 11th of June, 1583. Two days afterward, the vice-admiral complained of sickness aboard, and returned with the finest ship in the fleet to Plymouth. The admiral, nevertheless, continued his course with his little squadron, and took possession, with the feudal ceremony, of Newfoundland, to be held by him as a fief of the crown of England, in accordance with the terms of his charter.

The looseness of morals displayed by the mariners of that day is truly disgusting, and increases our wonder at the daring of men who could venture so far from home, in such frail barks, with almost a certainty of encountering on the great highway, in their fellow-men, greater perils than were presented by all the terrors of the deep. Robbery by sea was too common, and often committed in violation of the most sacred obligations, even upon persons engaged in the very act of relieving the distress of the depredators.* Gilbert seems to have been cursed with a remarkably riotous and insubordinate company. The sick and disaffected were left at Newfoundland to be sent home with the Swallow, and the admiral proceeded with his three remaining barks.

On Tuesday the 20th of August they sailed from the harbor of St. Johns, and on the 29th, in about latitude 44 degrees, the largest remaining vessel, by the carelessness of the crew, struck, and went to pieces, and the other barks were forced by a high sea and a lee shore to struggle for their own preservation, which they accomplished with difficulty,—alleging, at the same time, that they could see none of the crew of the wreck floating upon timbers, but all seemed to have gone down when the ship broke up. A few, however, escaped to Newfoundland in the ship's pinnace, as was afterwards discovered.

This calamity, followed by continual storms, in an unknown and shoaly sea, enhanced by an extreme scantiness of provisions, and want of clothes and comforts in the two little barks which yet Aug. 31. remained, induced the admiral, at the earnest solicitation of his men, to return homeward. Sir Humphrey Gilbert was vehemently persuaded by the crew of the Golden Hind to remain with them during the voyage; but, as some malicious taunts had been thrown out by some evil-disposed person, accusing him of being afraid of the sea, he chose to continue to sail in his little pinnace, the Squirrel, which was burdened beyond her strength.

* See a remarkable instance in Hackltyt, vol. III., 191, 196, &c.

After the vessels had left the Azores to the south, and reached the latitude of England, they encountered violent and continued storms. On Monday, the 9th of September, the Squirrel was nearly cast away, but recovered, and the admiral was seen sitting abaft with a book in his hand, and heard to cry out to those in the Hind, "We are as near to heaven by sea as by land." That same night, at 12 o'clock, the Squirrel being in advance, her light suddenly disappeared, and her hardy crew, with their gallant commander, Sept. 22, sleep forever in the deep. The Hind reached Falmouth in safety, but after encountering eminent peril to the last moment.*

The daring spirit of the mariners of that day is amazing. Sir Walter Raleigh, the step-brother of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, so far from being intimidated by the melancholy fate of his relative, or disheartened by the unprofitable and disastrous termination of March 25, 1584. most of the voyages to America, undertook in the very next year an expedition to the coast of the present United States. He easily obtained one of the usual unlimited patents from Elizabeth, and, leaving the cold north, with its barren snows, its storms, icebergs, and certain evils, together with its imaginary wealth, he spread his sails for the sweet south, where he was sure to find a fertile soil and a delightful climate, though his ship's company might not all be enriched by the discovery of gold.

On the second of July they found shoal water, "and smelt so sweet and strong a smell, as if they had been in the midst of some delicate garden abounding with all kinds of odoriferous flowers."

On the 13th they entered Ocracock inlet, on the coast of the present state of North Carolina, and landed on Wocoken Island. They commenced an intercourse with the natives, who proved to be bold, confiding, intelligent, and honorable to their friends, but treacherous, revengeful, and cruel towards their enemies.

The English explored a little the surrounding islands and bays, and returned home in September, carrying with them two natives, Manteo and Wanchese. The glowing description given by the adventurers, on their return, of the beauty of the country, the fertility of the soil, and pleasantness of the climate, delighted the queen, and induced her to name the country of which she had taken possession, Virginia, in commemoration of her unmarried life.

It might be expected that so favorable an account would soon lead to a new expedition. Accordingly, another was prepared for the succeeding year, consisting of seven vessels. 1585.

* Hacklyt, III., 184 to 202

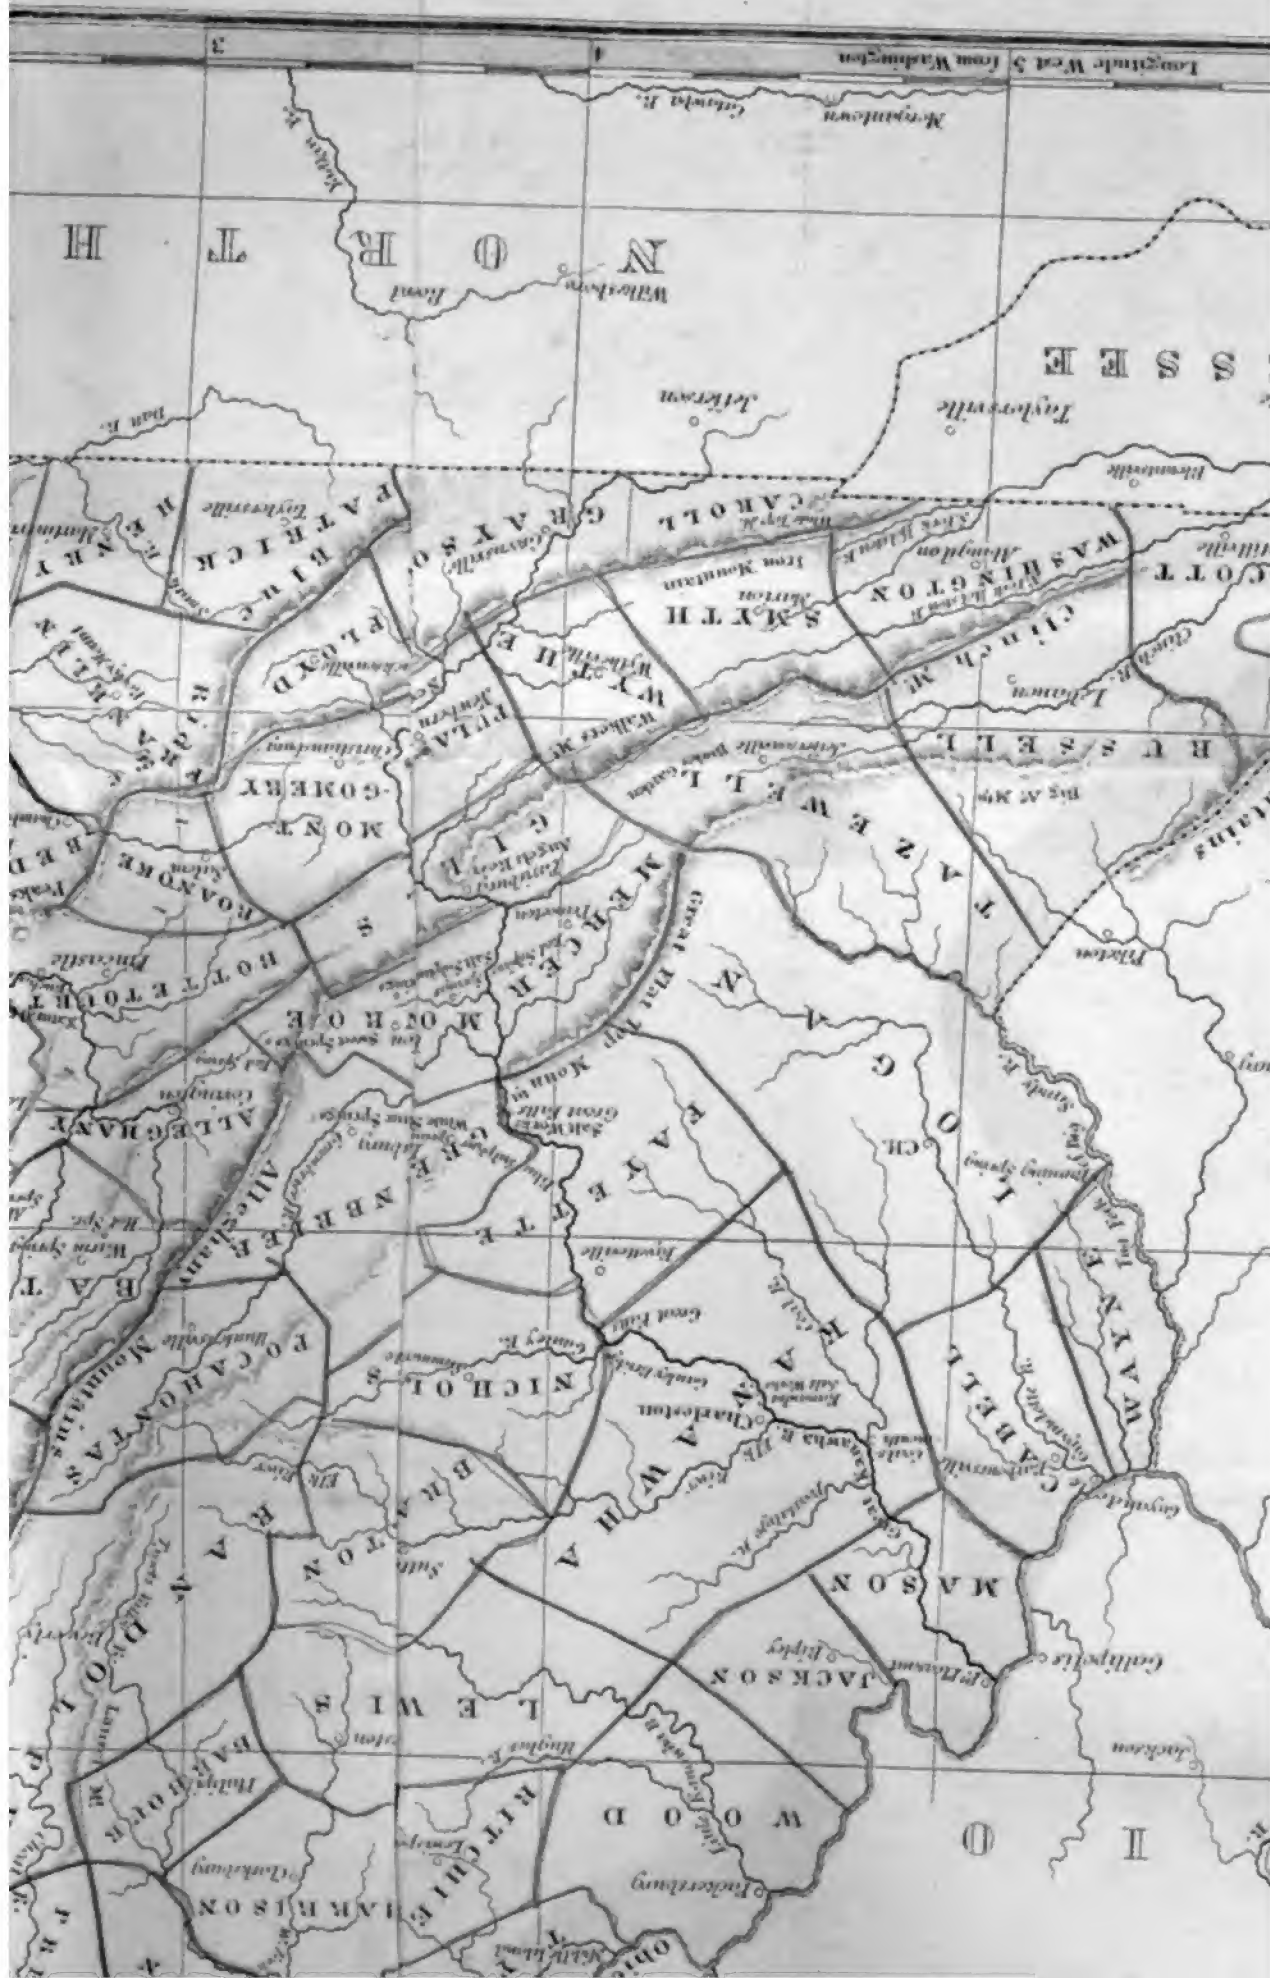

Ralph Lane was appointed by Raleigh governor of the colony, which consisted of one hundred and eight persons. Sir Richard Grenville took command of the fleet, and several learned and accomplished men attended the expedition, one of whom has transmitted to posterity many interesting particulars of the nature of the country, and the habits, manners, and government of its inhabitants.

The English soon began to maltreat the harmless, unpretending, and simple natives, and they, on the other hand, to grow jealous of the power of the overbearing strangers. They soon learned the inordinate passion of the newcomers for gold, and, taking advantage of their credulity, inflicted upon them the labor of many fruitless expeditions in search of pretended mines,—hoping at the same time, by these divisions, to weaken the power of the little colony to such a degree that they might be able to destroy it in detachment; but the English were too cautious for this, and went too short a distance, and in force too powerful for the Indians to encounter with the great disparity of arms. The greatest advantage which accrued from these expeditions, and indeed from the whole attempt at a settlement, was the discovery of Chesapeake Bay.

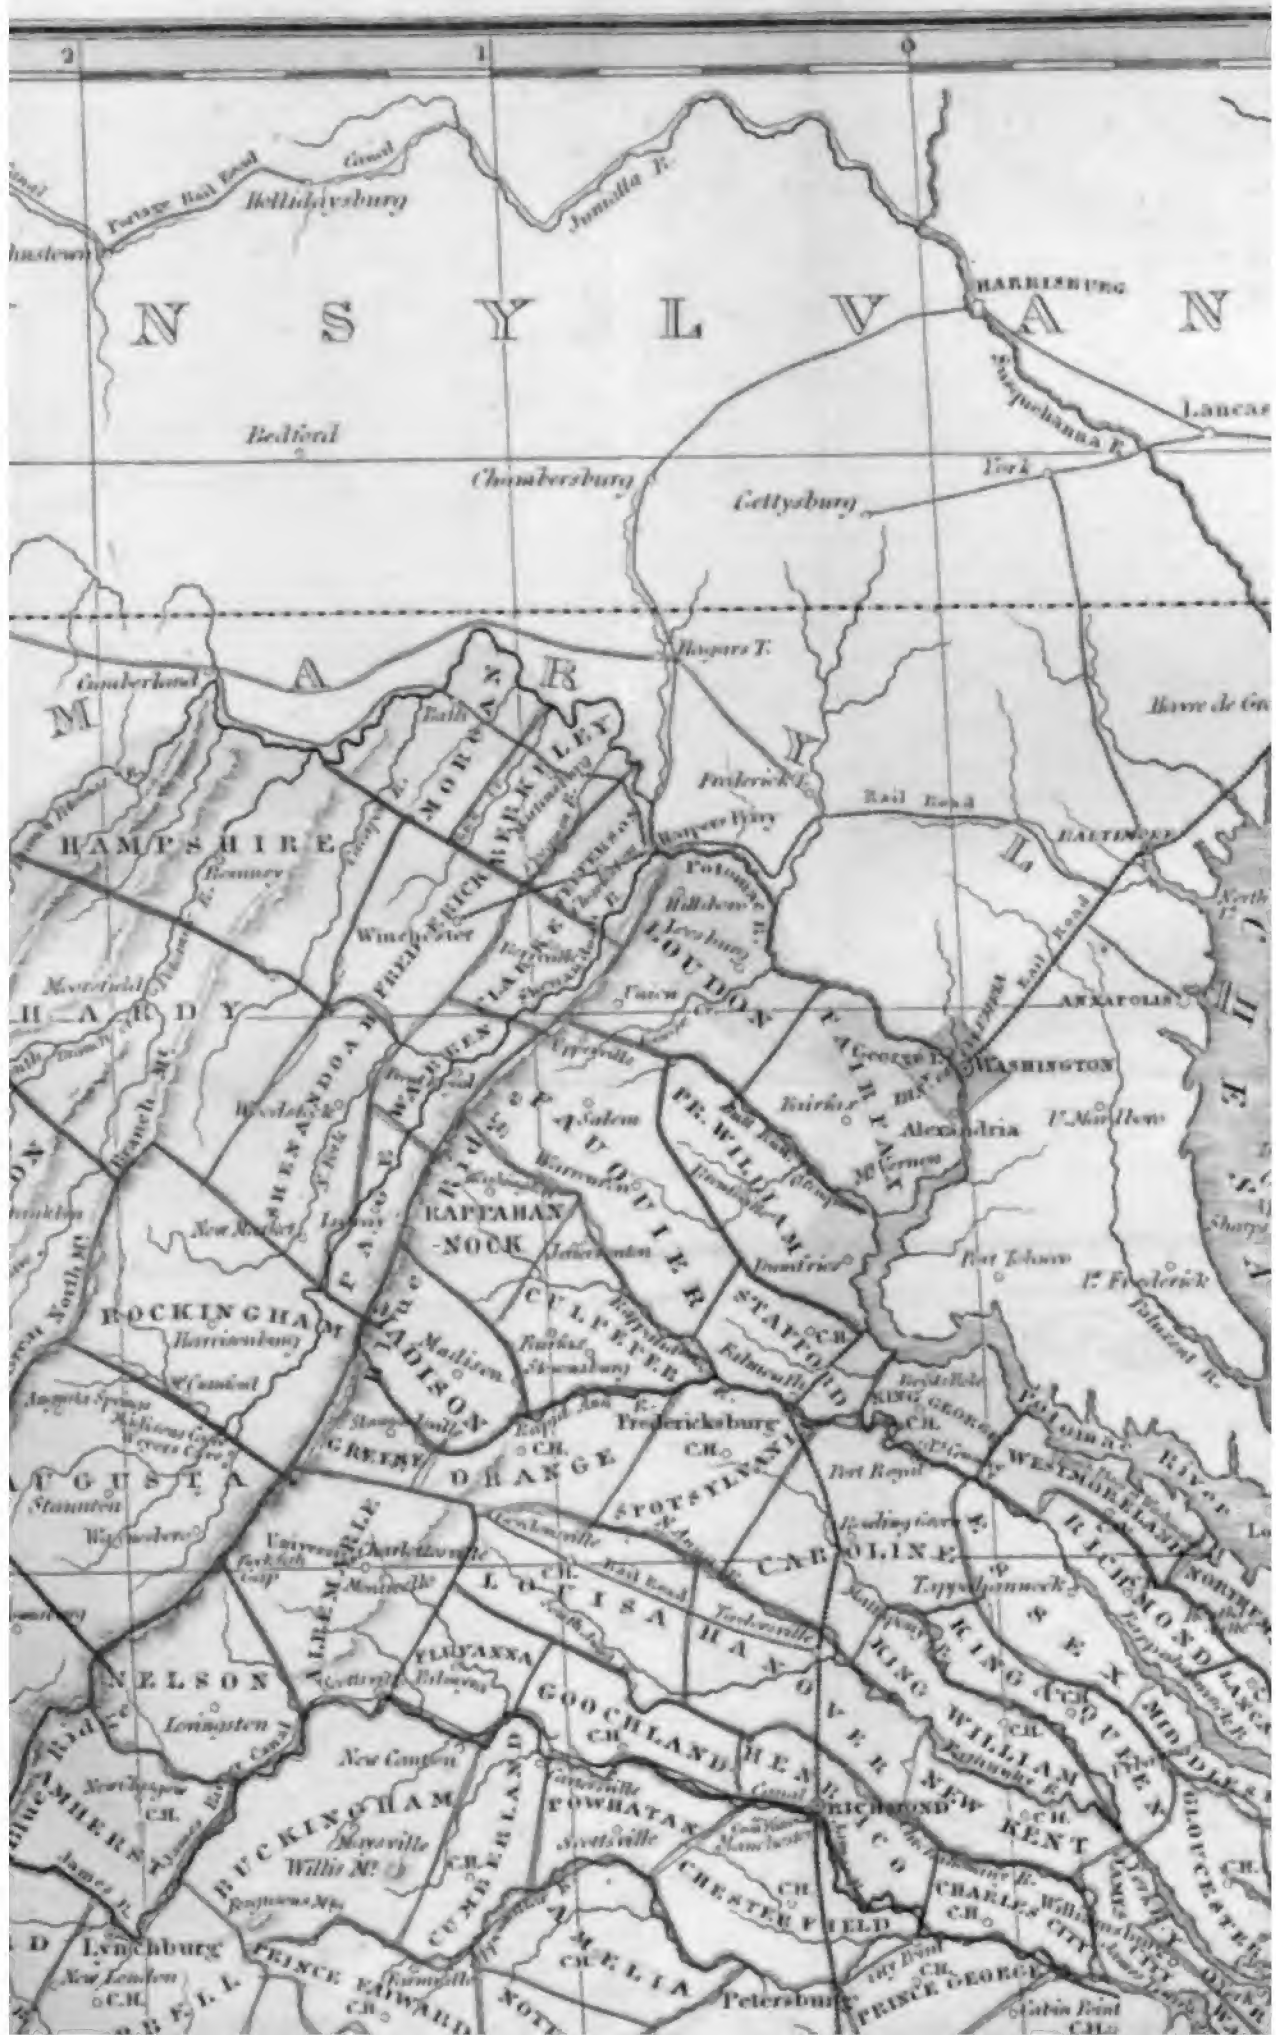

The little colony, finding no gold, and receiving no supplies from England, had begun to despond, when most unexpectedly Sir Francis Drake arrived, on his return from his expedition against the Spaniards in South America, with a fleet of three and twenty ships. The sagacity of Drake perceived in a moment what was necessary for the colony, and his generosity supplied them with provisions, vessels, and other things necessary to maintain their position, extend their researches, and, if necessary, to return to England; but the accomplishment of his purpose was defeated by a violent storm which suddenly arose, and nearly wrecked his whole fleet, driving the vessel of provisions intended for the colony to sea, and destroying the vessels which had been set apart to be left for their use. He would have supplied others; but the colony, with their governor at their head, earnestly requesting permission to return to England, he complied with their wishes. Thus terminated the first English settlement in America.

This little colony, during its sojourn with the Indians, had acquired something of their fondness for the use of tobacco, and learned to regard it with almost the same superstitious reverence, as a powerful medicinal agent. Upon their return, they introduced the use of this plant into England; and a weed at first disgusting and nauseating to all who use it, has become gradually the favorite luxury (and indeed with many a necessary of life) of all classes of society, and of both the young and the old throughout the world,—and this, after experience has proved that in most cases it is an injury rather than a benefit to the health.

A few days after Lane's departure, an English vessel arrived on the coast with every necessary for the colony, but finding it de-

Thus the volume comprehends a history and a gazetteer. Its advantages over formal histories are, that the events and their localities are given together, serving more strongly to impress the memory; the past and present are in juxtaposition, and many events given which regular history, in her stately march, does not step aside to notice—events usually considered of minor importance, but forming the undercurrent of history, and useful in illustrating the advancement and condition of society.

Written history forms but a small part of occurrences. The vicissitudes of war have been considered more worthy of narration, than those things promoting the wellbeing of man. Says an eminent essayist: "The perfect historian considers no anecdote, no peculiarity of manner, no familiar saying, as too insignificant for his notice, which is not too insignificant to illustrate the operation of laws, of religion, and of education, and to mark the progress of the human mind."

The great variety of subjects presented, and the almost impossibility of producing such a publication without errors and imperfections, has created a degree of diffidence in submitting it to the public. It will doubtless come before many possessing better means of information, and more knowledge on some subjects introduced, than could reasonably be expected in us.

Besides drawing largely from a great variety of publications, we are enabled to present much not previously published, as well as that inaccessible to the mass of readers. We do not, however, consider ourselves responsible for every sentiment introduced in these pages. In order to form a correct judgment, it is useful to hear the opinions of those who differ from us in their religious or political sentiments.

The drawings for the numerous engravings were, with a few exceptions only, taken by us on the spot. We trust they have an honest look, and faithfully represent their originals. Some biographical sketches are doubtless omitted, not less important than many inserted, while others have not due prominence. In some few cases we have supposed the reader to be familiar with them, while in others it arises from the extreme difficulty of obtaining the desired information.

The history of Virginia is of deep interest; but one imperfectly chronicled. Much is left to the investigation of the antiquarian, and many a thrilling episode is lost in the lapse of generations. Yet enough remains to stimulate to the loftiest patriotism; while the memory of her illustrious sons is cherished with just pride by our common country.

HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS
OF
VIRGINIA;

CONTAINING
A COLLECTION OF THE MOST INTERESTING FACTS, TRADITIONS,
BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES, ANECDOTES, &c.

RELATING TO
ITS HISTORY AND ANTIQUITIES,

TOGETHER WITH
GEOGRAPHICAL AND STATISTICAL DESCRIPTIONS.

TO WHICH IS APPENDED,
AN HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE SKETCH
OF THE
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

ILLUSTRATED BY
OVER 100 ENGRAVINGS.

GIVING
VIEWS OF THE PRINCIPAL TOWNS,—SEATS OF EMINENT MEN,—
PUBLIC BUILDINGS,—RELICS OF ANTIQUITY,—HISTORIC LOCALITIES, NATURAL SCENERY, ETC., ETC.

BY HENRY HOWE.

[Arms of Virginia.]

[Thus always with tyrants.]

CHARLESTON, S. C.
PUBLISHED BY W. R. BABCOCK.

1849.